The editor of the Madison Democrat is so well posted on public men that he calls so well known a man as James Freeman Clarke, "Mr. Clarke Freeman."

The Democrats in Congress will be free from bondage when that body adjourns. Ever since December they have been trying to keep from blundering, but with all their efforts, they haven't succeeded.

The Czar of Russia could not be killed by bullets and explosions, and now there has been an attempt to poison him. His position and twenty-five thousand dollars a day do not pay for all his trouble to keep out of the way of assassins.

With all the "glorious record" of the Democratic party, it has not a man who has the confidence of the party to that extent, that it believes he can be elected President. They will probably have to go away from home for Presidential timber.

Ben Hill in trying to make the country believe that little Tommy Hill is a Republican institution, and gotten up for the purpose of helping Kellogg to retain his seat. Hill will soon learn that the Republican party is no home for Democratic foundlings.

To-morrow will be a great field day in New York, as the Democratic State Convention will be held at Syracuse at that time. The proceedings will be of the nature of a Kilkenny cat fight, three factions being represented in the Convention. If the reports published on Saturday be true, Mr. Tilden will come out of the contest with flying colors, but a good deal scratched.

The terrible explosion of the powder works at Berkeley, California, of which an account was given in the Gazette of Saturday, appears to have been the result of carelessness. The men employed in the powder mill worked by the piece, and finding they could make more money by using iron hammers in picking cartridges than by using the wooden mallet, they disregarded the rules of the works as well as their own personal safety, and used the iron hammers. It cost twenty-four lives and a large amount of property, to indulge in that bit of carlessness.

The Hon. William Pitt Lynde, of Milwaukee, ex-Member of Congress, was interviewed in Chicago on Friday, on the Presidential question, when he gave it as his opinion that the Republicans of Wisconsin are almost unanimous for Blaine. In this Mr. Lynde is not a good political prophet. He also said he wanted to see Grant nominated for the reason that Davis, Seymour, or Justice Field could beat him. Here again, Mr. Lynde makes an unwise prophecy. It is a wonder he did not say that the great Democratic leader of 1876, could beat Grant. Leaving Tilden out in the cold, means something, for Mr. Lynde is a representative Democrat in this State.

There is an impression among those who know General Schofield most intimately, that the papers have been too harsh toward him regarding the Whittaker affair. It may be true that he merits milder treatment at the hands of the press and the public, but it is nevertheless an acknowledged fact that he has been very indiscreet in his statements concerning Cadet Whittaker. It is possible that the Cadet inflicted the injuries upon himself, but such an insinuation should not have fallen from the lips of General Schofield before the investigation began. Schofield is a poor disciplinarian—a jolly good man—but hardly fit for the commander at West Point. There has been a good deal of trouble there during his administration, and it seems to be on the increase. It is well to remark here, that while General Ruger, who formerly resided in Janesville, was in charge of West Point, and that for a little over five years, the Military Academy was comparatively free from hazing and scandals. The fact is he wouldn't permit such conduct.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

Enthusiastic Reception of General Grant by the People of Illinois—The General's Speech at Bloomington.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 18—One thing that will be interesting to the people of Illinois has been developed within a day or two. It is this, that when Senator Logan declared at the mass meeting at Chicago that General Grant's name would be before the national convention in June, he knew what he was talking about. The General's official train left Cairo at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Senator Logan and Colonel Grant had arrived on the early train, and in company with the Hon. Thomas Ridgeway went along. All day long there was one grand ovation and exhibition of popular enthusiasm that showed how deep rooted is the affection of this people for the hero.

The first place was Villa Ridge, and here a crowd of 200 cheered themselves hoarse. Then came Ullen and Donela. It was there the same thing. The train would stop, and there would be cries of "Grant, Grant!" The General would appear, and then the din would rise to a roar. At one place there was a flag at the head of the crowd, and there were loud calls for a speech. "There's Logan," was remarked when the Senator appeared with the General. "How are you, John? Give us a talk."

The Senator did give them a little talk in a red hot stalwart style of about five minutes, and was cheered to the echo. At Cobden a band was playing and a great flag had been suspended over the track. There was a tremendous cheering when the cars stopped, and five minutes was spent in shaking hands. "Glad to see you home, General," was a constant remark, and a speech was called for.

General Grant said he was glad to be in his own State once more. He was tired of traveling and was really homesick. He felt though that one foot was already within his own home since he crossed the river into Illinois.

At Mackanda, Senator Logan and Ridgeway said a few words. At Carbondale over 1,000 people had gathered with band and flags, and Captain Spencer's cadets fired a rousing salute of twenty-one guns.

At Duquoin over 3,000 people were on hand, and after a little address of welcome by one of the citizens, they called for a speech. The General said substantially what he had told the other crowd, and then there were cheers for General Grant, cheers for the next President, cheers for Logan, and then more for General Grant. In fact, there was a continual roar of cheers from the time the train stopped till it started.

At Ashley there was another crowd with flags and cheers.

Bloomington was reached at 11 o'clock. the approach of the party was announced by the ringing of bells in tower and steeple and thousands hastened to the depot, to approach which an hour before train time was next to impossible. Four howitzers had been manned, and when the party, accompanied by the committee who met them at Decatur, stepped from the train, the artillery bleeched forth the national salute, while a military band played national air. Prolonged and deafening cheers arose. Headed by the band and Company F Tenth Battalion I N G, the procession moved throug the gas lit streets lined with spectators. At the public square bonfires were blazing, and throughout the city illumination was general. It was nearly midnight, yet the city was all alive and ablaze with light. The national colors gleamed everywhere. Pictures of Grant were in every window, and unique and beautiful decorations, though but one day's notice had been given. The Ashley house was surrounded by an immense crowd, through which carriages passed with difficulty. General Grant and party stepped from their carriages amid cries of welcome. In a neat hall on the second floor a party of invited persons had assembled, and there Justice John M. Scott, of the State Supreme Bench addressed to General Grant fitting words of welcome. When he had spoken, Mr. Gus Hill, a young colored citizen and law student of this city, who, by the way, is a Democrat, presented to the General a handsome bouquet as a token of the respect and love of his race, accompanying the gift with a charming little speech that was applauded loudly. General Grant, who had stood hat in hand and with downcast eyes, listening, responded, his words coming slowly as if he labored under embarrassment, and in quiet tones. He spoke as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: It is alike pleasing for me to be thus welcomed by those who have always been upon the same side with me and those who recently were not. It may be appropriate on this occasion to refer to my trip through the Southern States, and to what I have seen while traveling. I have been gratified with my reception in the recently rebellious States. I passed on my way from Philadelphia to Florida on my way to Havana, and on my return came via Mexico, thus passing through all the rebellious States, and it will be agreeable to all to know that hospitality was tendered me at every city through which I passed, and accepted in nearly all of them by me. The same decorations were seen in every State that are seen here to-night. The Union flag floated over us everywhere, and the eyes of the people are as familiar with its colors as yours, and look upon it as guaranteeing to all the rights and privileges of a free people, without regard to race, color, or previous condition of servitude. In most of the States, upon the reception committees, side by sine, were men who wore the blue and men who wore the gray, and reception addresses were made in part by those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray. We have no reason to doubt that those who wore the gray will fulfil all they promised in loyalty to the flag of the nation. After traveling nearly three years in foreign lands, and comparing their condition and institutions with those of the United Staes, I am sure that we all ought to be good and loyal citizens. Ladies and gentlemen of Bloomington, I thank you.

Hand-shaking followed, and for half an hour the General received ladies and gentlemen of the city, who crowded about him. The party then entered the dining room and partook of supper.

NEW YORK.

Tilden's Great Struggle for the Victory at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, April 18—Every indication points to the belief that Tilden will endeavor to carry the convention, body, soul, and boots. The hypocritical assertion of the palsted perveter of the Cipher alley that he cares more for harmony than his nomination, is regarded as a clever dodge to secure sympathy. No one believes for an instant that the old man will withdraw. He is more eager for the candidacy now than ever before. It is the height of his ambition to be placed before people of the United States as the Democratic nominee for the Presidency. Tilden's advance guard, consisting of Herbert O. Thomoson, Sheriff Rowe, George H Powers, and John Fox, have arrived from New York, and are looking over the field. Thompson avers that Tilden will capture the Convention. Certain it is, the sage of Gramercy will leave no stone unturned to gain his point. Heretofore Tilden's strength has been in the country. The rural districts are almost without exception against him. Tilden's strength lies almost exclusively in the three factions in New York county, and Kings county, and which includes Brooklyn and Albany and Rensselaer counties. In New York, Kings, and Albany Counties, the County Committees appoint the delegates instead of letting the people choose them. In the rural counties the people vote for their own tellers and inspectors. If the people had had a voice in New York, Kings, and Albany Counties, the result would have been the same as elsewhere, decidedly anti-Tilden; but Tilden controlled the organizations, and could name whoever he liked for delegates. The country, the old wire-puller will find, is mighty, and it seems likely that it will prevail.

TO BE INVESTIGATED.

The Anonymus Letter of Springer to be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, April 18—The House has decided to investigate by a special committee the authorship of the anonymus letter which Representative Springer received, and which he believed to have come from H. H. Findley. After an acrimonious debate the Committee on Elections decided to humor Manning to this extent, particularly as Springer did not object. It is difficult to see what good can come of the investigation. Springer can only repeat the statement he has already made, and will bring experts without number who will swear that the anonymous letter and those signed by H H Findley, were written by the same person. Then Findley will take the stand and deny the authorship, and bring experts to swear that Springer's experts are mistaken. There the investigation will have to end unless the committee see fit to dig down a little into the motives, in which case they will find wires leading from the Committee on Elections to Gramercy Park.

THE STORM.

MADISON, April 18—The most terrific rain-storm, with thunder and lightning, that has visited this locality for many years, came this afternoon, and wrought considerable damage to roads and sewers. The streets represented rivers, and the low lands on either side of the city are flooded. There is a washout at the Chicago and Northwestern depot in this city, and news of washouts on the various roads is looked for. It is feared that new sown wheat fields on side lands will sustain much damage.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor.

PORTER, April 19, 1880—Your issue of last week (April 15) contains a sketch, from a Colorado paper, of the family of W. J. Porter, who was recently lynched at Alma, Colorado, in which are some serious "inaccuracies" which I desire to correct.

The account states that Porter's "father, mother and two children still live at Porter, Wisconsin, the place being named after his father."

W. J. Porter was of Irish parentage, and his father lives at Brodhead, Green county. Neither he nor any of his family ever lived in the town of Porter. The Porters residing in Porter are not relatives of his. The town of Porter was named for my uncle, Dr. John Porter, of Duxbury, Mass.

CITY NOTICES

Were man to conform more to the laws of health and of nature, and be less addicted to the gratification of his passions, it would not be necessary to advertise Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites as a restorative for the powers of the brain and nervous system, while the world's progress in enlightenment would indeed be marvelous.

The Manager of the

DICKIE LINGARD COMPA'Y

Respectfully announces to the theatre-going public that on Thursday evening of this week he will produce at Lappin's Music Hall, for the first time on any stage, a new, romantic drama, by Lawrence Moore, entitled

For HONOR'S SAKE

SYNOPSIS.

ACT I. Betrothed. Scene—At White Sulphur Springs, Virginia. ACT II. Parted. Scene—At Col. Vincent's Plantation. ACT III. Concealed Love. Scene—At Tom Chase's Northern home. ACT IV. War and Revenge Scene—Battle Field by Moonlight. ACT V. Reunited, Scene—An Old Ruin on the cliff.

In Act IV. is a strikingly realistic picture of a distant camp, with tents lit up, and camp fires burning. It cannot fail to thrill keenly those whose memories are impressed with old army days.

This interesting drama of the late Civil War will be produced with a full and strong cast, and new scenery, and a generous patronage is solicited. Tickets for sale at usual prices at King's. apr19 d4

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

Special Text-Book on Temperance—The Action of the New York Board of Education—Some Radical Thoughts on the Subject.

Scribner's Monthly.

By the vote of our city Board of Education, on the sixth of November last, the English school book, prepared by Benjamin Ward Richardson, called "The Temperance Lesson Book," was adopted among the text books which our city teachers are at liberty to use. We hope there are a good many teachers in the city who are willing to take up this book and teach it to their classes, for there is no doubt that boys go out in the dangers of the world lamentably ignorant of those that await them among the drinking shops. We are sorry that this instruction must come into the schools through special text books, though it is better that it come in this way than not at all. It must come, at last, into all competent schools, but when that point shall be reached, it will come in books on physiology and political economy, in a natural and perfectly legitimate way. A special text book on temperance may be well enough in the absence of general books, in which the topic has its appropriate place and space; but it is like a text book on opium-eating. In short, the incompetence of the books on physiology and political economy has forced the friends of temperance into the use of this make-shift, which is surely a great deal better than nothing.

There is, probably, no hallucination so obscure as that which attributes to alcoholic drink a certain virtue which is never possessed. After all the influence of the pulpit and the press, after all the warning examples of drunkenness and consequent destruction, after all the testimony of science and experience, there lingers in the average mind an impression that there is something good in alcohol, even for the healthy man. Boys and young men do not shun the wine-cup as a poisoner of blood and thought, and the most dangerous drug that they can possibly handle; but they have an idea that the temperance man is a fogy or a foe to a free social life, whose practices are ascetic, and whose warnings are to be laughed at and disregarded. Now, is alcohol, in its various forms, we have a foe to the human race so subtile and so powerful, that it destroys human beings by the million, vitiates all the mental processes of those who indulge in it, degrades morals, induces pauperism and crime in the superlative degree when compared with all other causes, corrupts the homes of millions and makes hells of them, and wastes the national resources more certainly and severely than war: yet so little have the writers upon physiology and political economy regarded this vital and economical factor in human affairs, that the friends of temperance have been obliged to get up and push a special text book upon it! Verily, they must be a brilliant set of men! Hereafter no text book on either physiology or political economy should be adopted in any school in the country that does not competently treat of the alcohol question.

It is a cruel thing to send a boy out into the world untaught that alcohol in any form is fire and will certainly burn him if he puts it into his stomach. It is a cruel thing to educate a boy in such a way that he has no adequate idea of the dangers that beset his path. It is a mean thing to send a boy out to take his place in society, without understanding the relations of temperance to his own safety and prosperity of society. Of course, the great barrier between the youth and correct knowledge, —the great mystifier and misleader, —is respectable society. This is practically saying to the young, pretty universally, that wine is a good thing. Fine dinners are never given without it, and good men and women drink it daily. They do not get drunk, they may be conscientious and religious, and many of them not only do not regard wine drinking as harmful, but as positively beneficial. The boy and the young man see all this, and think, naturally, that those who have experience in drink should know better about the results than those who let drink alone.

Now, what we want to do in our schools is to do away with the force of a pernicious example, and a long cherished error, by making the children thoroughly intelligent on this subject in alcohol. They should be taught the natural effects of alcohol upon the processes of animal life. (1st) They should be taught that it can add nothing whatever to the vital forces or to the vital tissues,—that it never enters into the elements of structure, and that in the healthy organism, it is always a burden or a disturbing force. 2d They should be taught that it invariably disturbs the operation of the brain, and that the mind can get nothing from alcohol of help that is to be relied upon. 3d. They should be taught that alcohol inflames the baser passions, blunts the sensibilities, and debases the feelings 4th. They should be taught that an appetite for drink is certainly developed by those who use it, which is dangerous to life, destructive of health, of body and peace of mind, and in millions of instances ruinous to fortune and to all the high interests of the soul. 5th They should be taught that the crime and pauperism of society flow as naturally from alcohol as any effect whatever naturally flows from its competent cause. 6th That they should be taught that drink is the responsible cause of most of the poverty and want of the world. So long as six hundred million dollars are annually spent for drink in this country, every ounce of which was made by the destruction of bread, and not one ounce of which has ever entered into the sum of national wealth, having nothing to show for its cost but diseased stomachs, degraded homes, destroyed industry, increased pauperism, and aggravated crime, these boys should understand the facts and be able to act upon them in their first responsible conduct.

The national wealth goes into the ground. It we could only manage to bury it without having it pass thitherward in the form of a poisonous fluid through the inflamed bodies of our neighbors and friends, happy should we be. But this great, abominable curse dominates the world. The tramp reminds us of it as he begs for a night's lodging. The widow and the fatherless tell us of it as they ask for bread. It scowls upon us from the hovels and haunts of the poor everywhere. Even the clean, hard-working man of prosperity cannot enjoy his earnings because the world is full of misery from drink. The more thoroughly we can instruct the young concerning this dominating evil of our time, the better will it be for them and for the world. Let us use the "temperance lesson book" wherever we may. Let parents demand that it shall be used, and particularly let all writers upon physiology and political economy for schools take up the subject of alcohol, and treat it so candidly, fully, and ably that their books shall no longer be commentaries on their own incompetency to fill the places whose functions they have assumed.

BEST IS CHEAPEST!

LEWIS' CONDENSED BAKING POWDER

STRICTLY PURE!

We will give $1000.00 for any Alum or other adulteration found in this POWDER.

Indorsed by the Brooklyn Board of Health, and by the best chemists in the United States.

It is STRONGER than any Yeast Powder in the world.

It NEVER FAILS to make light bread when used as directed.

It is COMMENDED by every housekeeper who has given it a fair trial.

It is an entirely NEW INVENTION, without any of the bad qualities of soda or saleratus, yeast or other baking powders.

It has in itself a tendency to sustain and nourish the system.

Good food makes good health; and health is improved or impaired in proportion as the food we eat is nutritious or otherwise.

LEWIS' BAKING POWDER always makes good food.

One can of this is worth two of any other baking compound.

It makes bread whiter and richer.

More than half the complaints of bad flour arise from the use of common baking powders, which often make the best of flour turn out dark bread.

The most delicate persons can eat food prepared with it without injury.

Nearly every other baking powder is adulterated and is absolutely injurious.

This is made from Refined Grape Cream of Tartar, and is PERFECTLY PURE.

It makes the BEST, lightest, and most nutritious

BREAD, BISCUIT, CAKE, CRULLERS, BUCKWHEAT, INDIAN, AND FLANNEL CAKES.

A single trial will prove the superiority of this Powder.

Extract from Report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue;

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C., January 26, 1880.

Messrs. LAWRENCE & MARTIN, 111 Madison St., Chicago, Ills:

GENTLEMEN: I have received a "certified formula" giving the ingredients and relative proportions used in the manufacture of an article which you advertise and sell under the name of "TOLU, ROCK and RYE." This compound, according to your formula, in the opinion of this office, would have a sufficient quantity of the BALSAM OF TOLU to give it all the advantages ascribed to this article in pectoral complaints, while the whisky and the syrup constitute an emulsion rendering the compound an agreeable remedy to the patient.

In the opinion of this office, an article compounded according to this formula may properly be classed as a medicinal preparation under the provisions of Schedule A, following Section 3,437, U. S. Revised Statutes, and when so stamped may be sold by Druggists, Apothecaries and Other Persons without rendering them liable to pay special tax as liquor dealers.

Yours Respectfully, (Signed) GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner.

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPO-PHOS-PHITES

NERVOUSNESS,

IT affords me great pleasure to bear testimony to the benefits I have received from using Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. I have recommended it to many of my friends, and it has proved an excellent curative for Nervousness and General Debility. It is also a first class Tonic—enables a person to take on flesh, rapidly, and is free from the constipating effects characteristic of other Tonics I have tried.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist

SIR—For several months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of incipient Phthisis, Chronic Bronchitis, and other Affections of the Chest, and I have no hesitation in stating that it ranks foremost amongst the remedies used in those diseases. Being an excellent Nervous Tonic, it exerts a direct influence on the Nervous System, and through it, it invigorates the body. It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended, when so many advertised are worse than useless. I am, sir, yours truly,

Z. S. EARLE, Jr., M. D.

It cures Asthma Loss of Voice Neuralgia, St. Vitus' Dance, Epileptic Fits, Whooping Cough Nervousness, and is a most wonderful adjunct to other remedies in sustaining life during the process of Diphtheria.

Do not be deceived by remedies bearing a similar name; no other preparation is a substitute for this under any circumstances.

From the Washington National Republican.

Tuesday afternoon, while Messrs John L. Hampton and Samuel R. Walker were engaged in digging a trench on a piece of ground belonging to the latter, about two hundred yards from the Shell Bank, on the Eastern Branch, back of Bladensburg, their implements struck, as they thought, a very hard and substantial substance, and concluding that it was only a large stone, continued to remove the earth to pry the stone from its position. After working for some time they managed to clear away sufficient earth to permit a view of the huge mass. They were greatly astonished to find that it resembled in shape a human being, and was very weighty. After many futile attempts to raise the mass, they wisely concluded to rig a derrick. Mr. Walker sped away to his home, and soon returned with the requisite apparatus, which they speedily put in working order. Placing strong ropes around each end of the body, they began to haul away, and when the object was brought out in full view their astonishment knew no bounds. So unexpected was the discovery that in their great excitement they almost lost control of themselves, and had the rope not been twisted round a tree, to make the hauling easier, the suspended body would have been precipitated back into its former resting place, and no doubt some of its portions would have been broken. The object which had thus excited these men almost to frenzy was nothing more or less than the body of a human being. The men placed it upon the ground close by, and, procuring some water from the Branch, proceeded to wash off the dirt. Each douse of water revealed something more and more startling to their astonished eyes. At last the dirt was all off, and on closer examination the body proved to be that of an Indian petrified—turned into stone. It measured six feet three inches in length, and was broad in proportion. The chest, arms, and legs were magnificently shaped and well preserved, and the head and the rest were perfect. It had evidently lain upon its back. One leg was slightly drawn up, and the left hand was clenched, but there was nothing in it. The right hand grasped a tomahawk. The hair was rumpled and matted. A large hole was found in the forehead over the right eye, which looked as if it had been made by a bullet. The theory advanced was that this was some great chieftain who had fallen in battle with the early settlers, and his braves being worsted, were obliged to retreat. Not having time to carry his body off with them, and not wishing the whites to fall heir to [it they hastily dug a grave and here deposited the mortal remains of their beloved leader. Messrs. Hampton and Walker believe that they had made a wonderful discovery. After viewing the body to their heart's content, they procured a vehicle, with the assistance of a derrick and two colored men, deposited the body therein and conveyed it to the railroad station and made arrangements for its transportation to this city. Mr. Walker yesterday came to this city, visited Professor Baird at the Smithsonian Institution, and made arrangements for the body to be deposited at that institution temporarily. It will arrive at the Baltimore and Ohio railway depot early this morning, and will be immediately removed to the Smithsonian by the aid of Knox's Express, in order to avoid the crowd which would gather later in the day. The great curiosity will be placed on exhibition, and will remain until the National Museum is ready for occupation. Messrs. Hampton and Walker have determined to become public benefactors, and will donate their curiosity to the government. It will be formerly transferred to the authorities about the middle of summer. President Hayes will be asked to receive the donation on the part of the government. Professor Baird and other eminent scientists pronounce this discovery to be of inestimable value. A petrified human body is regarded as one of the greatest curiosities. The petrification of human flesh is a matter of doubt not only among the general citizens but among some scientists. The skeptical are no longer in need of tangible proof. The body weighs nearly 2,000 pounds and is in perfect form and preservation, the features of the face depicting the death agony.

How a Married Woman Goes to Sleep.

From the Pittsburg Leader.

There is an article going the rounds entitled: "How girls go to sleep." The manner in which they go to sleep, according to the article, can't hold a candle to the way a married woman goes to sleep. Instead of thinking what she should have attended to before going to bed, she thinks of it afterward. While she is revolving these matters in her mind, and while snugly tucked up in bed, the old man is scratching his legs in front of the fire, and wondering how he will pay his next month's rent. Suddenly she says:

"James, did you lock the door?"

"Which door?" says James.

"The cellar door," says she.

"No," says James.

"Well, you better go down and lock it, for I heard some person in the back yard last night."

Accordingly, James paddles down stairs and locks the door. About the time James returns and is going to get into bed, she remarks:

"Did you shut the stair door?"

"No," says James.

"Well, if it is not shut, the cat will get up into the bedroom."

"Let her come up then," says James illnaturedly.

"My goodness, no," returns his wife. "She'd suck the baby's breath."

Then James paddles down stairs again, and steps on a tack and closes the stair door, and curses the cat and returns to the bed-room. Just as he begins to climb into his couch his wife observes:

"I forgot to bring up some water. Suppose you bring some up in the big tin."

And so James with a muttered curse goes down into the dark kitchen and falls over a chair, and rasps all the tin ware off the wall in search of the "big" tin, and then jerks the stair door open and howls.

"Where the deuce are the matches?"

She gives him minute directions where to find the matches, and adds that she would rather go and get the water herself than have the neighborhood raised about it. After which James finds the matches, procures the water, comes up stairs and plunges into bed.

Presently his wife says:

"James, let's have an understanding about money matters. Now, next week I've got to pay—"

"I don't know what you'll have to pay, and I don't care," shouts James, as he lurches around and jams his face against the wall; "all I want is sleep."

"That's all very well for you," snaps his wife, as she pulls the covers viciously; "you never think of the worry and trouble I have. And there's Araminta, who I believe is taking the measles."

"Let her take 'em" says James.

Hereupon she begins to cry softly, but about the time James is falling into a gentle doze she punches him in the ribs with her elbow and says:

"Didn't you hear that scandal about Mrs. Jones.

"What Jones?" says James, sleepily.

"Why, Mrs. Jones."

"Where?" inquired James.

"I declare," says his wife, "you are getting more stupid every day. You know Mrs. Jones that lives at No. 21? Well, day before yesterday, Susan Smith told Mrs. Thompson that Sam Baker has said that Mrs. Jones had——"

Here she pauses and listens. James is snoring in profound slumber. With a snort of rage she pulls all the cover off him, wraps herself up in them and lays awake until 2 a. m., thinking how badly used she is.

And that is the way married women goes to sleep.

Origin of the Postage Stamp.

Quite an interesting and curious story is connected with the origin of the postage stamp. One day a girl came forth from an inn located in the Northern part of England, and received from a postman a letter, which she turned over in her hand as she inquired the price of the postage. The man asked a shilling, a sum too large for one so poor as herself to pay, and so she returned the letter to the postman with sadness, although she knew that her brother had sent it. But a sympathetic traveler named Rowland Hill stood near, and at this moment interposed and insisted on paying the shilling himself, although the girl seemed strongly averse to his doing so. When the postman had departed, the kind hearted Mr. Hill was surprised to find that there was no need for his pity; for the envelope, the young girl explained to him, contained no written communication, but on its outside were certain marks agreed upon by herself and brother, from which, as she held the letter in her hands, she gathered all the information she desired. "We are so poor," she continued, "that we invented this mode of correspondence without paying for our letters."

Such duplicity set Mr Hill thinking that a postal system which incited people to commit petty fraud must be very defective. He argued that if the price of postage was lowered from an exorbitant rate to one that came easily within the means of the mass of people, so many more letters would pass through the mails, that the financial condition of the treasury would not be impaired, while society would derive much more benefit.

He became so interested in the matter that he managed to bring his views to the notice of the British Government, which gave them a favorable reception and on January 10th 1840, which may be considered the birth of the postage stamp, letters began to be circulated in every part of the United Kingdom at the postage rate of one penny. The experiment was successful to an extent much beyond all expectation. Rowland Hill became Secretary to the Postmaster General, and during the next ten years so great a change had taken place that in 1850 the number of letters sent through the mails was 7 239 862, against 1,500,000 in 1840.

HOWLING HAVOC!

A Cyclone Sweeps Through the County, Causing Ruin and Consternation.

Buildings Shattered and Scattered, and Several Persons Badly Injured.

Horses Killed, Stone Walls Demolished, Trees Torn Up, and Lumber Turned into Kites.

A Drenching Rain and Big Hail-Stones Serve as Body Guards for the Wind.

A Betailed Statement of the Losses, and Particulars of the Scenes of Panic.

Large Destruction of Property.

One of the wildest storms which ever swept across this county, and one the like of which has not been seen for many years, created much havoc yesterday, and caused a heavy destruction of property, endangered life, maimed limbs, and scattered consternation and ruin along its path. The storm swept through the county from the southwest to the northeast, its path lying through Turtle, La Prairie, Bradford and Johnstown.

This city seemed to be subjected to only the western border of the hurricane, but the rain fell here in torrents, the hail clattered, the wind blew strongly, and it was evident that it was no ordinary freak of the weather. On the East side of the river there was less rain and smaller hail stones, but on the hill the water seemed to gush out of the clouds, and poured down in great rivers. The hail stones, too, were so thick as to cover the ground, and some of them were literally as large as walnuts. The water poured into many basements of the city, flooded the sidewalks, and for a time gave to many localities the appearance of a miniature Venice. The damage in this city was not great. Some windows were broken by the hailstones, some damage was done by flooding and washouts, but though the wind blew for a time fiercely, still there was little destruction caused.

Dr. Horne's barn on Water street, had the foundation badly washed away by the water pouring down Court street and then turning down Water street. The barn settled down below the sidewalk, and the sand and washings of the street were swept about in strange confusion.

The large stained window in Christ Episcopal church was shaken so by the wind that it was necessary to put it in repairs to-day.

A number of minor damages were suffered, but still the storm in the city raged but feebly as compared with the havoc it created in the country.

The storm struck Shopiere about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was little rain and hail, but wind enough for two or three cyclones. In fact it assumed the twisted waterspout form, and swept through the village leaving scarcely a house uninjured. The roofs of the churches were blown off, and buildings wrecked badly. Houses were completely blown down, and barns went so quickly as to kill the horses which were sheltered therein. On some houses chimneys were blown off, others were stripped of shingles, woodsheds and outhouses were tossed about, fences cleared away, boards scattered far and near, trees uprooted, and a reign of terror came. As far as heard from though, few persons were injured, and they not seriously. Mr. Hickey, of the Pember house, drove through there shortly after the storm had swept by, and reports the appearance of the village as one of general ruin.

The storm swept rapidly on toward the north and a little east, the wind much of the time being so high above ground as to disturb the moveable things of earth very little. At times it would swoop down like a hawk after chickens, and would then rise again, as though satisfied with its feat of destruction. Its course could be plainly seen and watched. As it reached the town of Bradford, and swept along toward Mr. McCulloch's farm, Elder Gifford, who was watching it, said it seemed to sweep a track of about eighty rods in width. There was no rain, and but little hail, but enough wind to make up for the absence of both. There seemed to be two currents, one from the northeast and one from the southwest, and as they met they grappled, and wrestled. The southwest wind seemed the stronger and clinching its adversary, twisted it around and around and swept on in this wild whirl. As it was seen thus approaching it appeared high above the earth, but gradually descending. As it reached Mr. McCulloch's farm it came near enough to catch the roof of his barn and dash it to pieces. It caught up the evergreens and pulled them from the earth as though they were blades of grass. Passing hurriedly by it rose, then swooped down again with terrible force as it reached Robert Lillburn's farm. Here was a stone fence, which gave promise of standing for ages, but the whirling wind struck it, grappled with the great rocks, hurled them from their places, and in a twinkling cleared away about twenty rods of the stone wall, and made breeches in other parts of it. About eighty rods of board fence were quickly turned loose, the boards stripped from the posts, and sent sailing about like chips, leaving the naked posts standing there to mark the line. The entire orchard was destroyed, the trees being uprooted, the tops twisted off, and a frightful havoc made, in a few seconds, of what had taken years of patient labor to place there. All of the windows of the west side of Mr. Lillburn's house were broken, and half of the roof of his barn was swept off: Three cows were in the shed, and it being demolished, two of them were killed outright, and the third so injured as to cause death soon after.

Still further along in its path toward the northeast the cyclone struck Mr. Anderson's house on the Lamb farm. This was demolished entirely, and the lives of the family not only greatly endangered, but Mrs. Anderson was badly injured, and it was reported this morning that she was dying, but this is thought by others to be rather of an exaggeration.

When the storm reached Johnstown it had narrowed the cut of its swarth some what, and seeming but a few rods wide, but its fury was terrible. It swept away everything in its path. As nearly as can be ascertained at the present writing it reached Johnstown about half an hour after it struck Shopiere. There was some rain, and a great deal of hail both before and after the whirl of the wind. The house of Lyman H. Richardson was completely demolished and scattered in all directions, and but little trace could be got of any of the contents of the house. The family sought safety in the cellar, as they saw the storm approach, and the house above them was swept away without any injury falling to them. It was a two story frame house and was built quite substantial. When the wind reached the county buildings it quickly snatched the roof off that one occupied by the insane, laying completely bare one side of it, and lifted the building a foot or more off its foundations.

The main building on the Poor House farm also suffered much damage. The entire roof was carried off one wing. The trees all about the place were torn up by the roots, fences were scattered about like playthings in the hands of a giant. The track of the storm could be easily seen, and the swarth it cut was so clear that it is still marked as though a fire had run along destroying everything: Fortunately no one as far as heard from was injured at Johnstown, but the damage to property and to stock was great.

No such storm as this has swept across this county for years. The amount of damage cannot be estimated, but all along its path buildings have been shaken to pieces and scattered, foliage has been twisted into nothingness, cattle have been killed, and doubtless a larger number of persons than those reported have been more or less injured. In places the storm assumed the violent cyclone form, and catching an object gould carry it up, with lightning speed, and would tear a building to pieces like scattering the straws of a sheaf. The rain and hail, though heavy in the city and some parts of the country, served with the thunder and lightning as only a sort of accompanist, or side-play, but the wind was most terrible, and it will be long before all the details of the havoc it created, will be known.

Further, Details.

The storm at Shopiere and in that vicinity created great havoc. The storm was heard fully half an hour before it struck, and gave warning so that those who chose could seek refuge in the cellars. The storm did not last more than a few minutes at any one spot, but it did its work of destruction thoroughly, as well as speedily. For many of the following details we are indebted to John W. Crotsenburg. and to Darius Allen, who also gave us information:

The Congregational church was damaged to the extent of about $100, and the sheds were entirely destroyed.

Dr. Bell's barn was entirely removed from the foundation and damaged about $50.

E D Mosley's blacksmith and wood shop and and house were wrecked. Damage $1,000.

Mrs Randall's barn and some outbuildings were destroyed. Loss $300.

Henry Sweet's barn was unroofed, also James Parker's barn and other damage to other buildings on their places.

Thomas Holmes had three barns and his house almost totally wrecked, and the loss cannot be less than $1,500.

Allen's store in Shopiere was damaged to the extent of $100.

J. Dole had his two story house and one barn, 40 by 80, totally demolished, and four horses in the barn were killed. The loss must reach $2,000, and Mr. John Gordon, of Beloit, who was visiting at Dole's, had one horse killed, and his buggy totally wrecked.

Mr. J. W. Thomas had his house completely carried away, furniture and all, and not a vestige of it is left.

C. W. Stark's barn was carried away Loss about $500.

His father, W. H. Stark, had his barn unroofed and shed blown down. His bee hives were all destroyed causing a loss of about $500.

John Spencer's barn was totally destroyed. Loss $300.

Mr. Culver had two barns unroofed.

The Turtle bridge at Shopiere was completely destroyed and dashed into the river. Loss $1,000.

Peter Fonda's house was unroofed. Loss $100.

The damage to George Sears' mill and buildings reached $1,000.

T. Day's barn was somewhat damaged.

John Shimeal's barn was damaged to the amount of $100.

The Rood house was damaged to the extent of $100.

The damage done to Mrs, Shelby's house and barns amounts to $50.

Lou Wagner's house was slightly damaged, also Mrs. Ressiguie's house more or less damaged.

Vincent Truesdell lost his sheds, which were totally wrecked.

Mr. Warrick had the east end of his house blown away.

Jerry Schenck, of La Prairie had his barn and house unroofed, and two horses killed.

S S Hart, of La Prairie, had his house totally destroyed and barn unroofed. Not a vestige of his furniture can be found, and nothing was left but the clothes on his back.

The Methodist church, at Shopiere, was unroofed and its sheds demolished. Loss $300

J Hopkins had his apple orchard completely destroyed.

The depot at Shopiere was totally wrecked.

Mrs George Fern and her two children, who lived on the Holme's farm were severely injured.

ANOTHER DESCRIPTION OF THE STORM.

We are indebted also to D G Cheever for some particulars concerning the storm and the damage done in the vicinity of Shopiere. He says that parties who witnessed the progress of the storm represent it as two clouds of inky hue, that gradually approached each other, at whose meeting, the whistling motion commenced, and the cyclone was formed. It first struck the village to the southwest and lasted about fifteen minutes.

He writes that in order to appreciate the wrath of the storm king one must see the ruins. The streets of Shopiere are almost impassible from ruins and demolished buildings, uprooted trees, wrecks of farming tools, wagons, and buggies. It is difficult to estimate the damage, but probably it is at least $50,000 in that immediate vicinity.

FURTHER FROM EMERALD GROVE.

Robert Lillburn's loss is estimated at fully $2,000.

James Plantz' barn was literally riddled, and the fences all torn down.

On McCulloch's place, occupied by Mr. Winkley, not only was the barn unroofed, but a corn bin with 4,000 bushels of corn was completely wrecked.

A small house on R. Cheney's place, one mile south of Emerald Grove, was torn to pieces. The occupant, a Norwegian, lost everything.

The house occupied by Mr. Anderson on the farm belonging to Mr. Lamb, on the middle road, was wrecked. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were both injured, and four horses were carried bodily a distance of between one and two miles.

FROM ONE ON THE SPOT.

SHOPIERE, April 19—Yesterday at about 4:30 o'clock p. m., a terrible hurricane or cyclone struck the village of Shopiere, doing much damage, coming from the southwest and going northeast. Its first great damage was Mr. John Hopkin's orchard, only leaving 7 or 8 trees standing out of 150 or more; thence to Mrs. Far's house doing slight damage. Then Mrs. Mosley's orchard and blacksmith shop were destroyed, and house, the ell part, roof off; then across the street, Mrs. Randall's barn, a total wreck. On the north side of Main street F. N. Parker's orchard and a partial damage to his barn, and moving his large house three or four inches on the foundation; then to Mr. Sweet's two-thirds of his barn is gone. The bridge across Turtle creek was thrown from its foundation into the creek. Thence unroofing I S Parker's barn and some sheds. Then taking the roof from Thos. Holmes' barn and demolishing his carriage house and hog pen; then taking one-half of the roof off the brick store and then stripping the iron roofing off Seares' mill and one half the roof off his barn and cooper shops. On the other side of the street. Peter Fonda's house was unroofed. John Shimeal's new barn, just boarded, torn down, and Mrs. Silby's barn and ell part to her house. Methodist church, roof torn off and south end badly broken and horse sheds a total wreck, as also the horse sheds of the Congregational church. Several small houses were injured more or less. John Spencer's barn was unroofed and sheds torn down. Mrs E E Culver's barn unroofed and house some damaged, and numerous other damages in Shopiere. Crossing the creek to E J Dole's, his house was unroofed and otherwise damaged and his large barn a total wreck, and three or four horses killed. Next, I W Thomas' house completely in atoms; the depot mostly gone. C. W. Stark's barn gone, and W. H. Stark's barn unroofed, and house partly unroofed; his orchard uprooted, and his bee hives strewn in all directions. The next place was the farm of Thomas Holmes, in La Prairie—a house, barns and sheds, two corn cribs. There was not lumber enough left to build a pig pen. The next was R. W. Schenck's house. The roof was taken off, and a large barn completely wrecked, and further on other buildings were destroyed. On the farm of Thomas Holmes Mrs Fern and three children were injured, and Mrs F Cadly was hurt. Jerry Schenck had two horses killed.

THOMAS HOLMES.

AT BELOIT.

The wind at Beloit was not so much of the cyclonic nature as at other places, but it blew fiercely, and did some damage. It scattered the boards in Sherwood & Reigart's lumber yard, tore away one section and the vane of the Chicago & Northwestern wind mill, blew down the scaffolding at the Eclipse Wind Mill's works, and did some damage to the wells of their new factory. Little rain fell.

DR. SUTHERLAND'S ACCIDENT.

Dr. Sutherland, while out riding on horseback yesterday morning met with a serious mishap. His horse stumbled, and threw the doctor, and then fell upon him. At first it was thought the doctor was very seriously injured, there being a very bad bruise on one shoulder, and an apparent concussion of the brain. To-day he was however, able to be up on his feet, and went to Palmyra to attend to a patient, though his strength and condition did not seemingly warrant his being out of doors.

Pretty and Young.

in every feature but the hair, which had grown white from fever. This lady at 35 writes us: "I have used Parker's Hair Balsam six months and am more than pleased with it. It has restored the natural brown color of my hair and given it a silky softness, nicer than ever before. There is no Dandruff, no falling hair, and it leaves the scalp so clean and nice and cool that I am ever so much pleased, and I feel and look like myself again." The beautiful, fresh and vigorous hair it produces, together with its property of restoring gray or faded hair to the natural youthful color, and entirely freeing the head from dandruff and itching, surprises no less than it pleases. Sold in large bottles at only 50 cents and $1 00 by all first class druggists.

"THE FOWLS OF THE AIR."

The pulpit of the Congregational church was yesterday occupied by Rev. H. T. Rose, of Milwaukee. This gentleman is one of the bright-ministerial lights of that city, and is the successor of Rev. Myron W. Reed. Mr. Rose is a solid-looking, middle-aged man, has a well-shaped head, a satisfying presence, and a good delivery. The most noticeable items of his outward appearance were a tightly buttoned frock coat, a light neck-tie and an auburn mustache. The morning congregation was large, but the storm diminished the attendance in the evening.

The following is a brief synopsis of the evening discourse:—Matthew; 8:20—"The fowls of the air have nests."

The birds were intended to teach great principles of love and care. Their habits teach God's providence and oversight. That was Jesus' view. Now people, many of them, take other views. Now their opposite characteristics are seen. They are in misery, they fight, suffer and die, in common with all animated nature, Our age looks on misery more than happiness, and so the sad conclusion is reached there is no God.

First, It is easy to overestimate the amount of suffering among God's creatures. It is a gratifying truth that there is much pleasure among them. The dog in the chase, the horse in a race, the cow on a summer's eye; even the imprisoned canary, all reflect great happiness. We discover in them traces of intelligence, a rudimentary mind, a perfect adaption to surroundings, and they are not like the human race, forever restless and ambitious. Death is common to all. It is doubtless true that animals do not suffer from death as human beings. This is proven by the less fear of death on the part of savages. Death is not an arbitrary arrangement. It is a divine scheme by which a beneficent result is attained.

The sum of happiness is increased by a succession of generations. Variety is an object in life, so a number of generations is preferable to one that is protracted. It is a crime to injure or mutilate animals, and organizations to prevent cruelty are praiseworthy institutions.

Secondly, can suffering exist in harmony with divine love? It is a common thought that a benefient being would not tolerate such suffering, hence the conclusion, there is no God. It must be acknowledged that for some indescribable purpose He, while exhibiting perfect love, still tolerates misery. Human love is often manifested by the practice of pain, as in surgical operations, or the separation with children who go away for on education. All evidence shows that to remove all sorrows from the world, would be to make it the more miserable.

Is there not so much suffering in the world as to disprove the idea of universal love? We can at best know but little of the nature of the lower animals. There are forms of anguish which we cannot conceive, but on the other hand, we cannot realize the continual pleasures which they have There can be no doubt of the latter.

Thirdly, there is danger of inconsistency on the part of many who magnify the sufferings and minimize the pleasures of animals. The persons who hold this view do nothing to lessen the anguish of creatures. Man has produced more suffering and death among animals than has been caused by all other means. The kindness shown to the lower animals by man is mostly fictitious. The regard shown for calves and chickens is only for a time, it is at last that these latter may minister to the comfort of the latter. It is a frequent mistake that those who decry the sorrow in the universe, are guilty of increasing it.

Finally, it is through pain that the various attributes are developed, speed, vigilance and carefulness. It is a part of the divine wisdom, and it is all for the temporal and eternal good of all created things.

THE TOMBSTONE TROUBLE.

The trial of George Craig for mutilating another tombstone in the Evansville cemetery came to a close Saturday evening about 7 o'clock, after two days had been spent in taking the evidence and arguing the case, District Attorney Sale for the prosecution, and Attorney Pliny Norcross for the accused. The evidence was about the same as brought out on the former trial, and it resulted in a verdict of guilty, the jury having been out but about five minutes. It is understood that on the first ballot, there were five for conviction and one for acquittal, but that the next ballot resulted unanimously for conviction. Justice Brooks sentenced the prisoner to three months in jail at hard labor, but an appeal is taken to the Circuit Court. It looks blue for Craig, and if other cases are pressed for the other stones defaced, he will have a long term of it, but a man who is guilty of such an offense, deserves little pity.

CREIGHTON'S OPENING.

As will be seen by a notice given in another column the great millinery opening of J. & D. Creighton will occur next Friday evening. The simple announcement ought to be sufficient to cause the ladies to throng the store as the display this year will be larger and better than ever.

"FOR HONOR'S SAKE."

It will prove a pleasing surprise to many to learn that real name of Lawrence Moore, the author of "For Honor's Sake," is William Moore Lawrence, whose boyhood was passed in this city, and whose first alma mater is the Janesville High School. This will add fresh interest to this play, which is to be presented at Lappin's Music hall next Thursday evening by the Dickie Lingard company. The play is highly spoken of, and it will be watched with keener interest than ever, now that it becomes known who the author is. Those critics who have examined the manuscript deem it worthy of a careful presentation to the public and the company which is to present it will doubtless handle it in a worthy manner.

This is not the era of historical plays. The author of "For Honor's Sake," has not made the mistake of attempting such a work. He aims only to give a series of vivid and realistic pictures of Northern and Southern life, the late war serving as a background. Several years spent in the South gave a basis for his studies of Southern character. The South offers a rich field for the American dramatist, which has been but little worked. Uncle Tom's Cabin, the Sensational Octoroon, and Bartley Campbell's Fairfax, are the only plays which draw from this source. All of these deal with the ante-bellum South. 'For Honor's Sake" works the modern realistic vein.

DEATH OF WILLIAM HODSON.

The death of William Hodson, which occurred at his home in this city early yesterday morning, comes with a sudden and sad surprise to his many friends and acquaintances in this city, as he had been ill but a few days, and when seen upon the streets less than a week ago, he seemed in usual health and vigor. His illness was short but severe, and despite medical skill and tender care, death came. He had reached the age of 74 years, and was an Englishman by birth, removing to this country, and settling in this city as early as 1846 He was engaged in various enterprises here, during the succeeding years, and was engaged for some time in the milling and distillery business in Turtle. He was a man whom everybody knew, for he was easily approached, social and genial, and ever active. He was a man who kept himself well posted in the events of the day, with the history of the past, and delighted to indulge in friendly discussions. He had a large fund of wit and humor, and enjoyed the merry tinge of life. In fact he had many good qualities of head and heart, which endeared him to his family and friends, and the blow to them is a heavy one.

The funeral services are to be held at his late residence on Lynn street, Fourth ward, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

BRIEFLETS.

—Overcoat weather.

—Many showers, few flowers.

—April is giving the boys a raw deal.

—The churches had a light attendance last evening.

—The Bower City Rifles give their dance this evening.

—One hundred and fifth anniversary of the battle of Lexington.

—Lackner, the grocer, has sold out to John Galbraith, and William Reed.

—Burr Robbins expects to be able to ride at the head of the street parade on the first of May.

—The Baptist church folk are to have a social at the church parlors next Friday evening.

—Hanchett & Sheldon are to-day getting in their telephonic connection with the central office.

—Florence Herbert's constellation appears at the Opera house this and every evening of the week.

—C. E. Ranous has bought at auction the Merritt Case house in the Fifth ward, paying therefor $950.

—There was an alarm of fire Saturday evening caused by a burning chimney at Wm. Cannon's residence. No damage.

—The Florence Herbert Company arrived this afternoon, and will show up at the Opera house this evening in Miss Moulton.

—Howard Lee, of Nash & Lee, leaves this week for the West, where he expects to locate permanently and engage in mercantile business.

—William Cannon says the new boy who came Saturday night weighs ten pounds. Who says Janesville isn't increasing in population?

—Mat Sullivan, of the Northwestern round house, has purchased the Alden place on Racine street and will put it in order for his future home.

—The new Police Court room in the Gazette block has been painted, cleared up, and cleaned up, and will be opened for business to-morrow. It is a conveniently arranged and airy room.

—The Northwestern passenger depot is not only having its outside repainted, but the interior is to be wholly refitted, grained, calcimined, etc., and put into the best and neatest condition possible.

—At the money order department of the postoffice in this city there were last week 124 orders issued amounting to $1472.80, and 71 paid amounting to $1073.26, making a total cash handled, $2,545.34.

—Mrs. Caldwell is to open her floral depot on West Milwaukee street next Wednesday. This will be glad news to the ladies, and to those who admire plants and blossoms. She has some beauties.

—The freight business on the Wisconsin division of the Northwestern road is booming. The boys say it don't give them much chance to hang around the groceries and pick codfish. It's first in, then out, and on the go all the time.

—Lew Rock, the Superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, had another paralytic stroke yesterday affecting his right side. This morning he is reported as a little more comfortable, and his recovery is hoped for.

—Some more business changes are reported. J. W. Nash, the grocer, is to move from Cannon's block, where he is now doing business, and will occupy the new building which his son has been erecting across the street. E. V. Whiton & Co., have rented Nash's store in Cannon's block. This change will give Nash the benefit of a fine refrigerator warehouse for keeping provisions and fruits, and will give Whiton an excellent location for a drug store.

—Some young fellows who are evidently en route for Waukesha and Waupun, busied themselves yesterday morning with tangling up the harness of an old horse, which stood hitched near Court Street church, and the owner of which was doubtless engaged in worship at the time. The lads fastened the tugs to the post, and the reins to the whiffletree, strapped the cushion onto the horse's back, and disarranged things generally. It was a very funny thing to do, and the only wonder is how in the world they ever happened to think of anything so extremely comical. It must have taken more brains than their friends gave them credit of having.
